

Sunday, March 14, 2010 The Journal News

News notes from the business world

Courtney C. Shea, who grew up in Elmsford and attended Maria Regina High School in Hartsdale (Class of 2000), has joined Boston law firm Barron and Stadfeld's litigation department as an associate. Shea had been a judicial law clerk for the justices of the Connecticut Superior Court.

Katonah resident John P. Sullivan, FAIA, president of Sullivan Architecture, has joined The Club at Briarcliff Manor's Advisory Board. Sullivan's firm, which is located in White Plains, provides site planning and architectural design services to both the public and private sector. Sullivan serves on the Town of Bedford's Planning Board, the President's Advisory Council of the Northern Westchester Hospital, as well as other professional, civic and private organizations.